Excerpt from History of the Public School Society of the City of New York: With Portraits of the Presidents of the Society

The History of the Public School Society of the City of New York, presented in this volume, has been prepared in compliance with the request of the Society, and the repeatedly expressed wishes of numerous friends of the cause of public education. At the last meeting of the Society previous to its dissolution, held on July 22, 1853, a resolution was adopted authorizing the President and Agent to place at the disposal of a competent writer such documents in possession of the Society as illustrate its rise, progress, and history. This resolution was not acted on until the close of 1854, when a very numerous meeting was held, at which a committee of five was appointed to superintend the work, and under whose revision it should be finally submitted to the public. This committee consisted of George T. Trimble, the President, Joseph B. Collins, the Secretary, Samuel W. Seton, the Agent of the Society, Assistant Superintendent of Common Schools, Hiram Ketchum, and Charles E. Pierson, M.D. The committee elected a secretary for the performance of the work, whose fitness for the task was to be found more in the enthusiasm of his admiration for the Society, and his earnest sympathy with the cause of public instruction, than any other merit that he might possess. It is, perhaps, not impertinent to remark, that the author had for several years previously entertained the purpose of writing a History of the Society, while there were yet probabilities of its permanence as an educational establishment. I'm super hyped about the VR, but you obviously knew that already because of my last blogpost. There were a few hiccups because I ordered it online and I was working during the time it came. I stressed, freaked, jumped and finally gave up on the thought I got to play on the day it came out. But luck was on my side and when I got home, 20 minutes later the VR glasses arrived! In this post I will take you with me on my first experience with virtual reality. Was it as awesome as I hoped? Or is nauseating and not really my cup of tea? Read and find out!
