

Leadership, a Practical Guide to Theory and Practice

Leadership is a highly debated topic in contemporary America and around the world. The mystery of leadership and in particular, good leadership has long been debated by respective civilizations for centuries. Respected authors throughout the history of modern man have posited many theories and new theories continue to emerge though scholarly and practical examination of hypotheses as modern societies search for new and improved ways of accomplishing effective leadership. It has been argued and largely accepted that good leadership is not the purview of a specific brand or type of leadership but an amalgam of different leadership principles and practices. For example, leadership is not an issue of traits, dispositions, situations, and visions per say. Instead, leadership is a combination of all such behaviors, attitudes, and characteristics. Good leadership therefore brings to the role of leadership a combination of the respective leadership principles depending on traits, behaviors, and the situation of prevailing circumstances. Leadership must be recognize not so much as a group of followers and leaders independent of each others duties and responsibilities, but must be seen as a relationship between leaders and followers. I proffer that it is the relationship that exists between leaders and followers that forms leadership.

I'm super hyped about the VR, but you obviously knew that already because of my last blogpost. There were a few hiccups because I ordered it online and I was working during the time it came. I stressed, freaked, jumped and finally gave up on the thought I got to play on the day it came out. But luck was on my side and when I got home, 20 minutes later the VR glasses arrived! In this post I will take you with me on my first experience with virtual reality. Was it as awesome as I hoped? Or is nauseating and not really my cup of tea? Read and find out!
