Excerpt from Proceedings of the Philological Society, Vol. 3: For 1846-47 and 1847-48A paper was then read: -On Orthographical Expedients, by Edwin Guest, Esq. The laws of letter-change have been investigated with a zeal, which may have been called for by the importance of the subject, but which has certainly not been attended with a proportionate success. An humbler line of research, and one which promised more satisfactory results, has been comparatively neglected. A knowledge of the contrivances resorted to at different periods to express the various articulate sounds used by language, would seem to be essential to any real progress in philological science; but the slight attention which has been hitherto paid to the subject is calculated rather to discover than to enlighten our ignorance. Philologists have generally hurried over inquiries which led to no immediate result, and whose chief object was merely the removal of difficulties from the way of future investigations. It is probable there never was a language which had all its sounds represented by their appropriate symbols. A spoken language is ever liable to change; and though peculiar circumstances - such as the existence of a national literature, and reading habits widely spread among the people - may check, they have never yet been known entirely to subdue this tendency. But a system of orthography is much less flexible than the language to which it has been accommodated; littera scripta manet, and the difference in the rate of change between the written and the spoken language must necessarily produce a certain amount of conventional spelling, which may prove a serious obstacle in the way of philological inquiry. In the older and the purer languages, discrepancies between the spelling and the pronunciation were probably rare and comparatively unimportant. Welcome to the blog of Joan le Grande. I'm changing the blog to english so forgive me the dutch articles before. I already translated a few, keeping it up! Anyway, stay tuned for lifestyle articles and reviews about games or other nerdy stuff. Enjoy! Categories Comics Games Playstation 4 Wii U Lifestyle Posted by Joan le Grande in Games, Playstation 4 Leave a comment Tagsexperience, first look, Games, Playstation 4, Playstation VR review, ps4 VR review, virtual reality YES YES YES. I'm super hyped about the VR, but you obviously knew that already because of my last blogpost. There were a few hiccups because I ordered it online and I was working during the time it came. I stressed, freaked, jumped and finally gave up on the thought I got to play on the day it came out. But luck was on my side and when I got home, 20 minutes later the VR glasses arrived! In this post I will take you with me on my first experience with virtual reality. Was it as awesome as I hoped? Or is nauseating and not really my cup of tea? Read and find out!
