

The Journal of Philology, Vol. 26 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Journal of Philology, Vol. 26 Great progress has been made during the last half-century in the study of the metrical and rhythmical phenomena exhibited by the Greek and Latin poets. I do not here propose to add one more to the list of these inquiries, but to record the results of a study of the Latin hexameter poets made from a point of view rather rhetorical than rhythmical. In the course of this exposition I wish to make some inquiry into the causes by which the effects here noted may have been produced. Evidence will have to be produced in a statistical form, and to do this satisfactorily is most difficult. Observations such as those I have been making are peculiarly liable to be vitiated by subjectivity. Of this I am well aware, and I have done my best to set forth trustworthy details, as is more fully explained below. Two general precautions are necessary. The observer must be ever on his guard against a readiness to admit evidence favourable to conclusions already half seen by anticipation: and the materials when collected must not be strained as evidence. I can only say that I have striven to observe these precautions, and that I shall not infer anything from the exact relations of various percentages. Welcome to the blog of Joan le Grande. I'm changing the blog to english so forgive me the dutch articles before. I already translated a few, keeping it up! Anyway, stay tuned for lifestyle articles and reviews about games or other nerdy stuff. Enjoy! I'm super hyped about the VR, but you obviously knew that already because of my last blogpost. There were a few hiccups because I ordered it online and I was working during the time it came. I stressed, freaked, jumped and finally gave up on the thought I got to play on the day it came out. But luck was on my side and when I got home, 20 minutes later the VR glasses arrived! In this post I will take you with me on my first experience with virtual reality. Was it as awesome as I hoped? Or is nauseating and not really my cup of tea? Read and find out!
